PROGRAM BY HART HOFFMAN

WHY DID SO MANY JEWS GO TO LEADVILLE, COLORADO?

"How German Jews changed the way America shopped."

Hart Hoffman will share her journey to discover her ancestor, David May, founder of The May Department Stores. It began in Leadville, Colorado, at 12,250 feet in the Rockies, where many German Jews built their fortunes.

In Europe, Jews were restricted by government decree—limited in where they could live, marry, and work. Some were small merchants, dreaming of a better life in America.

When David May arrived in the mid-1860s, traditional jobs were fading, but being a merchant offered economic stability and civic leadership. Leadville, Colorado, was where many, like May and Meyer Guggenheim, found success.

Western gear allowed.

Six shooters must be left at door.
